VITAMERS

New food processing technology means we can harness and stabilise naturally occurring vitamins in ways we never could before. Until recently, we could only isolate and process a fraction of the vitamers within a vitamin. Now, we're able to do more.

Here's how it works: A handful of spinach gives us great vitamin and vitamer diversity but when we consume synthesised vitamins (yellow circles), we miss out on the vitamers that are more difficult to process (blue, purple and green circles).

We need those vitamers for complete nutrition. They fill in the gaps of specific vitamin intake, much like sand or small pebbles fill in the gaps between large rocks in a jar. So how do we get both? Convenient nutrition PLUS vitamer diversity? We've got an idea.

Whole Blend is our solution for convenient, complete nutrition.
